Part 2

Questions 6-10

The people below all want to go on a holiday where they can do something to help the environment. On the opposite page there are descriptions of eight working holidays. Decide which working holiday would be the most suitable for the following people. For questions 6-10, mark the correct letter (A-H) on your answer sheet.

6

Erin is a biologist and wants to spend at least two weeks during the summer studying large marine animals. She prefers not to camp or to cook her own meals.

7

Ben works in a zoo and is doing a research project on European wild animals. He would like to work closely with one particular type for several months to study it in detail.

8

Ed has an interest in the countryside and would like to spend his week off on a conservation project involving plants and flowers. He would like to have food and accommodation provided.

9

Julie is studying veterinary medicine. She has a fortnight's holiday and wants to get some experience of working with a wide range of different animals, outside Europe.

10

Leo is worried about the future of some marine animals and is keen to spend the summer educating the public about ways to limit the damage that is occurring. He enjoys living very simply.

Working Holidays

A Zolfo Springs

Are you an animal lover who won't mind cutting up meat for tigers, building cages for monkeys or creating a home for bears? Zolfo Springs, Florida, USA, cares for a variety of homeless exotic animals rescued from theme parks and circuses. Luxury camping facilities and all meals are provided, two weeks' minimum stay, all year round.

B Murlough

A seven-day working holiday is being run at this beautiful nature reserve on the coast of Ireland. You will cut firebreaks to help reduce the danger to flowers and trees, dig up out-of-control plants and bushes and repair a footpath. You will stay in a comfortable farmhouse with delicious home-cooked meals provided.

C Bottlenose

Are you a strong swimmer? If so, join the volunteers at the Dolphin Research Centre. After training you'll go out into the Mediterranean to photograph dolphins and check their health. Fixed two-week stays in April and May in campsite accommodation with plenty of opportunities for watersports.

D Brooksville

This zoo in the USA houses leopards and pumas. All were kept in private homes until their owners realised how unsuitable these big cats are as pets. Helpers stay in comfortable private rooms for a minimum period of two weeks. Duties include cleaning cages, preparing food and helping with a public information programme.

E Archelon

You will work in the Mediterranean Marine Park in Greece observing sea turtles from a distance and protecting the beach nesting sites. Most of your work will involve informing tourists about dangers this creature faces. You will stay on a very basic campsite for a minimum of 28 days, though a longer period is preferred.

F Madeira

Two thirds of this island is a natural park. Fit and willing helpers with a knowledge of flowers and ecology are needed to control non-native plants. These are a danger to the island's unique plants and trees. You arrange your own food and accommodation and can take part for as long as you like.

G Valday Hills

Every spring, scientists in the hills of northern Europe rescue abandoned baby brown bears. They need helpers to raise and feed them, before returning them safely to the wild three months later. Some experience of handling animals is necessary and you will stay in simple rooms at a biological research station.

H MEER

As a helper on the Mammal Encounters, Education and Research programme you'll be taken on whale-watching cruises to collect information, take photos and make sound recordings. You'll stay in a four-person apartment with meals provided for two or four weeks, June – September.

Part 3

- 19 The video of the play will be used by Film Studies students in their classes.
- 20 Students can find out more about the sailing trip from the Head this week.

WELCOME TO HARTSFIELD COLLEGE

To all new students,

I am writing to introduce myself as Head of the college and to welcome you to a new college year. You may have met me on our Open Evening early last year, when we opened the college to students thinking of coming to study here. I am glad to see that so many of you who saw our facilities then have chosen to study at Hartsfield.

I would also like to take this opportunity to give you some information about the college this term.

Staff News

I would like to announce the appointment of a new Head of the English Department, Jean Morgan, who will take up the post after Christmas. Plans for a welcome party should be decided shortly, and we would like students from the department to join us for this event.

Staff Training

The college will be open only for staff training on Monday 29th October. After the half-term holiday, students should return to college on Tuesday 30th October.

Late Arrivals

May I remind all students arriving late that they must enter their names in the book outside the college office, together with the date and time of arrival.

Book Sale

You are invited to our Book Sale in the library next week, when a selection of books from all departments will be on sale. The money from the Book Sale will be spent on new books for every department. If you cannot come to the Book Sale, you will still have the chance to buy any books remaining after the event from our college website. However, Book Sales are popular so students should try to attend to avoid disappointment.

The college will also run a Book Sale competition this week. We need colourful posters to display around the college, telling people about the Book Sale. Three prize winners will each receive £20 to spend on books.

Theatre Visit

This term the college will have a visit from a touring theatre group who will perform a play called Deep Blue Sea, which all students are welcome to attend. We also need two students from the Film Studies Department to video the event, as all students from that department will then work on the video as part of their college coursework next term.

College Trip

We are hoping to have our annual sailing trip this year as usual. Could anyone who is thinking of going please sign the list outside my office by this Friday. I will supply details of the trip when I know more about the arrangements later in the term.

I wish you all a pleasant and successful term at Hartsfield.

Mrs E Walsh
Head of College

Part 4

Questions 21-25

Read the text and questions below.

For each question, mark the correct letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet.

Chris Sharma

In professional rock climbing, where people become injured quickly, a decade is a long time. Chris Sharma, who grew up in California in the USA, has been a climbing hero for many years. When he was only 15 he had climbed most of the hardest routes in America and had come second in the World Cup. In 2001, he completed Realization in Céüse, France, which is regarded as one of the hardest climbs in the world.

Sharma has admitted that completing Realization was a huge goal for him. 'That was the end of the first stage of my climbing life, when I was pushing myself and taking part in competitions. I worked on the Realization climbing project for almost four years, which is longer than I've ever worked on a piece of rock. Finally finishing it was an amazing experience. Afterwards, though, I didn't feel like going near any more rocks, even though I still had a lot to learn.'

Sharma then took some time out from climbing. 'After Realization, being so famous became difficult so I decided it was important to just be a normal person. Then, people wouldn't attach anything special to me. I've seen my friends and family a lot more but I've also tried out some new things. That way I can meet people who don't just want to talk about climbing.'

But it was not long before Sharma was climbing again. In a recent interview, he explained, 'I've always loved climbing and it's also my job. Companies pay me because I sell their shoes or something. But the people who buy these products are climbers. I want to thank them for the opportunity they give me to live this life.'

- 21 What is the writer doing in the first paragraph?
- A informing people about Sharma's climbing style
 - B providing details about Sharma's attitude towards climbing
 - C describing how Sharma prepares himself for a difficult climb
 - D summing up the main achievements of Sharma's climbing career
- 22 What was Sharma's attitude on completing Realization?
- A He considered it an important event in his career.
 - B It taught him everything he needed to know about climbing.
 - C He regretted his decision to attempt it.
 - D It encouraged him to enter a competition.

- 23 What does Sharma say about his life after Realization?
- A He was afraid to do any more difficult climbs.
 - B He found the attention he received hard to deal with.
 - C He wanted to make some new friends to climb with.
 - D He wanted to meet people who shared his experiences.
- 24 What does Sharma say about his recent involvement in climbing?
- A He is thankful that he is still fit enough to climb.
 - B He would like a contract with a large sports company.
 - C He is grateful for the support he gets from other climbers.
 - D He intends to do more interviews for climbing magazines.

25 Which of the following is Sharma most likely to say about himself?

A

All my friends are climbers and I have never wanted to meet people from outside the climbing community.

B

Realization was my greatest challenge. But once I decided to do it, it only took me a short while to complete.

C

I've been really lucky and I've done well, but I really should have started climbing when I was a teenager.

D

Although this sport has always fascinated me, I have needed to take a break from it occasionally.
