

English & other languages

Some Canadians speak French, especially in Quebec. They're called French Canadians or Quebecers. They are bilingual and use English words. For example they say C'est trop cute! to say C'est trop mignon!

But they don't use the English words that entered our French language. For instance, we say weekend but they say fin de semaine. We say parking but they say stationnement. And the road signs don't say stop but arrêt!
