

What was your most important mission ?

The most important mission was the Alasay battle, whose consisted to pushed the Taliban at the back of the valley to protect the north and the south of the area we were defending but for me it's not the most lasting memory. All the missions that we have done after that were also important for the country. Thanks these missions we discovered IEDs which are Improvised Explosive Device. We could do ambushes and arrests.

After you stayed 6 months in Afghanistan, what did you feel when your superior told you would soon go back to France ?

When we leaved our country we knew that we would come back. It's the feeling of impatience which was the most present. The good news had been my return in mid-June. Finally after 6 months spent there in Afghanistan, I will see my family which waits my return with impatience.

Do you think that this experience was a good experience ?

On a professional point of view, yes, this was the result of 12 years in the army, I knew that the mission wasn't easy but I was confident because my training had been perfected
