

Taking a gap- year could be a good choice because school is hard. Sometimes we have to do competitions in order to accomplish our goals and obtain the jobs we've been dreaming of. As you can understand, considering a break is a good way to continue our work with great effort and energy. Considering myself, I haven't really planned any time soon to take a break, because I have the feeling that I'll losing 1 year of my life. For me, the quicker I finish with school, the quicker I can start my life. In fact, I feel unproductive because I'm spending all my days doing nothing except playing. Although I want to finish my studies quickly, I don't intend to leave school earlier. Before anything else, I will achieve my objectives that consist in obtaining a master's diploma in computer science. As you can see, these are long studies and I don't want it to be anymore longer by taking a gap year. But in the case I get too tired of hard-working and if I feel that I can't handle it, I will take a break. For the moment I'm motivated and I want to become a game development manager, I'm already advanced in terms of writing scripts, that shows my determination and I'll never give up on my dreams until it becomes a reality.
