Compte rendu

Le document soumis à notre analyse est un reportage écrit de la chaîne NPR sur les effets de la crise sanitaire sur l'emploi.

En effet, les travailleurs ont payé un lourd tribut à cause des nouvelles règles et restrictions sanitaires. Beaucoup se sont trouvés au chômage.

La journaliste Aline Selyukh s'entretient avec Kary Watson, serveuse depuis 16 ans à Seattle. Son restaurant a du réduire le temps de travail et revoir le menu. Maintenant, elle recherche un emploi comme Nathalie Roblin qui faisait du marketing pour une entreprise à la Nouvelle Orléans ou Neftali Dubon, un entrepreneur dans les docks de LA et de Long Beach. Les mesures d'interdiction de regroupement de plus de 10 personnes et les fermetures de bars et avenues ont eu un impact désastreux sur l'industrie du tourisme. Cependant, les patrons restent bienveillants et promettent de reprendre leurs employés quand la situation s'améliorera. Perla Pimentel, un employé dans l'événementiel confirme l'état de la catastrophe dans le milieu touristique. Toutefois, malgré la perte de son emploi, elle réussit à garder la tête froide. Elle se dit qu'elle dispose de plus de temps pour passer avec sa grand-mère et que pour pallier ses difficultés financières, elle a décidé de remplir sa demande d'allocation chômage, de rénégocier le remboursement de son prêt d'étude et de chercher un nouveau métier.

Essay: How did you experience life during the Covid 19 outbreak? (100 words)

A Day in my Life, written by Pierre, 18, Schoelcher

The coronavirus has changed the way we live. My sister had to come home from college. My parents had to work from home, and I had to go to school from home. Everything was closed. We couldn't go to the movies, to restaurants, to stores, or meet friends. We're all waiting at home.

My grandparents said they had never seen anything like that in their lifetimes. Where I live and in more places around the country, we had to stay in our houses unless we had to leave the house for medical care or to buy food. So, I hadn't been out of the house much in two weeks. I missed everybody at school and missing the rest of my family. One thing we started to do is meet up with my dad's big family over the internet using Zoom. We did this for my grandpa's birthday, and we could all see each other on the screen at the same time. Grandkids from all over the world were there, from Guadeloupe, New York,

France. It was pretty amazing and really fun to see all my cousins. It was a nice way to celebrate my Grandpa's 85th birthday since none of us could be there.

The near future is uncertain for my country and all the countries in the world. In some ways, we all have a common enemy for once, the virus. I'm hoping the countries of the world see what they have in common a bit more after this terrible disease has attacked us all. My country was not prepared to respond, so maybe we can be more prepared. So, maybe this common suffering and challenge will make the world see each other as one thing, as one people. Not that our countries and cultures aren't important, but that we can all help each other prepare to limit the suffering and unnecessary death that has surprised the world this time with this virus.
